

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

- Is 90% attendance good?

It's not bad but should be a lot better. Any less than 90% and your child cannot do their best. Below 90% is considered persistent absence.

- What is poor attendance?

The Education Welfare Service works closely with School Attendance Officers and become very concerned at 86% and below, legal action may be taken in some cases.

- What do these figures mean?

90% attendance at the end of a school year means your child has been absent on 19 days. 86% attendance at the end of a school year means your child has been absent on 25.5 days.

- What does Persistent Absence mean?

In simple terms any child that continues to have low attendance throughout the year will have persistent absence. Lots of odd days illness that break many school weeks will cause this.

- What does genuine illness mean?

High temperature, diarrhoea and sickness, childhood ailments e.g. measles tonsillitis are genuine illness. A child should not be kept home with coughs, colds, tummy aches and headaches.

- Can I take long weekends and odd days as holidays?

Not really, again the government does not encourage this. Too many Mondays and Fridays missed would not be good for achievement. You cannot request a holiday for a day out e.g. birthday treat.

- What does Zero Tolerance mean?

Holidays will not be authorised during the first two weeks in September, SATS, Mocks and GCSE times of the year.

- What does Penalty Notice mean?

The local authority can fine each parent £60 for each child. This means a family with two parents and two children could face a fine of £240 for unauthorised absence.

- Can a fine be paid in instalments?

No – a fine must be paid in full within 4 weeks or it will double. Failure to pay at all will lead to prosecution.

Remember: If you want your child to do his/her best they must be in school at least 90% of the time. That means no more than 19 days genuine absence in one year.

Kingsdown School encourages your child to attend school every day and on time to achieve their full potential. Our expectation is 96% Attendance for all!
